

FRUIT OF THE MU-YU, THE SOUTH CHINESE WOOD-OIL TREE (Aleurites MONTANA (LOUR.) WILS.). (S. P. I. No. 36897.)

A single seed and portions of a dried fruit, showing the characteristic ridges of the outer shell of the fruit, called by the southern Chinese the Mu-yu. This is a more tropical species than the Tung-yu (wood-oil) tree (A. fordii), but its oil is probably quite as valuable. Natural-size photograph (P13746FS), by E. L. Crandall, December, 1913.
